Music player for android offline

Are you tired of streaming music? While convenient, streaming also eats up your mobile data and can get sick if you have a lot of digital music. If you want to enjoy offline music on your phone, there are many great apps for this purpose. Here are the best offline music player apps for Android, some that you may not know about. Note that many popular music streaming apps, such as Spotify and YouTube Music, offer the ability to download music for offline playback. However, we won't include them here, as they are mainly built around streaming. Best Free Offline Music Player app for Android You don't have to pay for a great listening experience. Let's take a look at the best free music player apps for Android first. 1. Aimp Image Gallery (3 Images) At first glance, AIMP looks a little simple for music players. Flat interface design is currently popular, but the AIMP approach feels a bit empty. This could be the point, though. The app is easy: it plays your music and doesn't mess with distractions. It handles almost any type of audio file--- including lossy and lossless formats---and comes with a 29-band equalizer, which is rarely seen in music players. It can also mix multi-channel files into stereo and/or mono. Overall, if you can get through the interface, it's a solid choice that won't let you down. Download: AIMP (Free) 2. jetAudio HD Music Player Image Gallery (3 Images) jetAudio HD offers a free and premium version of its Android music player. However, you get so much in the free version that most users don't have to upgrade. The only drawback is that the free versions are supported by advertising, but they are not intrusive. Here's what you get: a 10-band equalizer with 32 presets, lossy and lossless support, effects like reverb and x-bass, playback speed control, automatic gain control, and more. The Plus version comes with a 20-band equalizer, built-in tag editor, more than a dozen widgets, and several other convenience features. Download: jetAudio HD Music Player (Free in-app purchase available) | jetAudio HD Music Player Plus ($3.99) 3. Rocket Music Player Image Gallery (3 Images) Rocket Music Player has been around for a while and has come a long way since its ins and outs. Developers fix many bugs, improve performance, and expand feature sets. For free, you get a 10-band equalizer with multiple presets, over 30 themes, built-in tag editor, Chromecast support, a sleep timer, a good playlist manager, and even support for podcasts. Get premium apps to unlock gapless playback, replay gain, crossfading, tag editing, expanded support for audio formats, and more. Download: Rocket Music Player (Free in-app purchase available) | Premium Rocket Player ($3.49) 4. Phonograph Music Player Image Gallery (3 Images) Phonograph is a great looking music player app. This is mainly because many theme color sets are built in; interface colors also change dynamically to fit the content of the content It's pretty standard as far as features go, so don't expect a lot of bells and whistles. But if you just want a simple listening experience that never gets in your way, Phonograph might be the music player app for you. Download: Phonograph Music Player (Free, in-app purchase available) 5. Pixel Player Image Gallery (3 Images) If you're not happy with the lighter options discussed so far, we recommend trying Pixel Player. It's not very famous, but it's still pretty good. Although the Pixel only supports basic file formats, it has a five-band equalizer with bass boost, gapless playback, a built-in tag editor, and several customization options, such as themes and colors. Notably, Pixel Player can analyze what you're listening to and suggest more music to suit your tastes. Pixel+ Music Player is also available. It removes ads and unlocks all features. Download: Pixel Player (Free) | Pixel+ ($1.99) 6. Impulse Music Player Image Gallery (3 Images) What makes Impulse Music Player different? It's designed as a movement-controlled music player, making it perfect for any situation where you're preoccupied---as when cooking or driving. In addition to gesture control, Impulse Music Player supports a number of useful features: a five-band equalizer with bass push and virtualizer, no gap playback, crossfade, metadata editing, automatic album art downloads, and more. This music player is not a gimmick; it is very functional and definitely worth a try. Note that for some reason, the free version of the app is listed as a Music Player on Google Play. The Pro version is called Impulse; both were developed by Appmetric. Download: Impulse Music Player (Free) | Music Player Impulse Pro ($1.99) 7. Shuttle Music Player Image Gallery (3 Images) Intuitive and lightweight is the difference that Shuttle Music Player enjoys in most other music apps. It feels smooth and goes well on older devices. While there's nothing typical about the interface, it's pretty easy to use. Free features include a six-band equalizer with bass boost, no gap playback, multiple theme options, a sleep timer, and several customizable widgets. Shuttle+ Player provides several additional features: built-in tag editor, folder browsing, Chromecast support, and additional themes. Download: Shuttle Music Player (Free in-app purchase available) | Shuttle+ ($1.49) 8. BlackPlayer Image Gallery (3 Images) BlackPlayer is the best free music player we have ever used. It's clean, modern, beautiful in the eyes, easy to navigate, and packed with features. You get a five-band equalizer, no gap playback, scrobbling, and a sleep timer. The premium version, BlackPlayer EX, has additional themes, fonts, additional settings to change, more ways to customize your experience, visualizers, sorting better, and the first taste of all the features of the future. For just a few dollars, it's worth it. Download: BlackPlayer (Free) | BlackPlayer EX ($3.59) Image Gallery (3 Images) MediaMonkey is a great app for offline offline It scans your local storage for any music before adding it to your library, so after a quick setup, you should be ready to do so. It plays a variety of file formats, both lossy and lossless. The app has features you'd normally expect from an offline music player: track editing functions, EQ, multiple navigation modes, and even a sleep timer. MediaMonkey Pro lets you sync through Windows. You can even set up your home computer as a music server, where mobile apps can stream. Do this at home and you won't eat up your cellular data, as it works over your Wi-Fi network. Download: MediaMonkey (Free, in-app purchase available) | MediaMonkey Pro ($4.99) 10. PlayerPro Image Gallery (3 Images) Like most apps here, PlayerPro has all the features of a standard premium music player. Thus selecting down to the interface. Although most non-Material applications are crappy, PlayerPro's unique design is attractive and satisfying to use. Special convenience features include importing music history and ratings from a desktop music player, custom smart playlists, voice search, and free plugins. Download: PlayerPro Free (Free) | PlayerPro ($3.99) 11. Pulsar Image Gallery (3 Images) If you're using an older device with outdated hardware, many modern apps can frustrate you with poor performance. Pulsars strike the perfect balance between beautiful appearance and light performance. Coming up at --- lack of advanced features is --- doesn't mean the Pulsar is barebones. You still get smart playlists, quick searches, gapless playback, and a built-in tag editor that works pretty well. To feature an equalizer, bass booster, and five-band reverb, you'll need to upgrade to Pulsar Pro. Download: Pulsar (Free) | Pulsar Pro ($2.99) Best Paid Offline Music Player App for Android While many free apps offer paid upgrades, completely free apps can be used indefinitely without upgrading. All of the following apps require payment to use, in addition to a free trial. 12. n7player Image Gallery (3 Images) n7player has a beautiful sleek interface. At this price point where all competing apps pretty much have the same set of features, the interface can be one of the deciding factors. And for that, n7player makes a solid case. The 10-band equalizer, volume normalization, and gapless playback are all great, but n7player's real selling point is the nuanced approach to organizing your library. Nothing is ever more than a few beats away. Download: n7player ($3.49, in-app purchase available) 13. Neutron Player Image Gallery (3 Images) Despite its outdated appearance, Neutron Player is one of the best music players if you are an audiophile, you will immediately recognize that the audio from this application has maximum quality. And that's what sets Neutron Player apart: it's really a music player for audiophiles. You'll need to connect your device to the right set of speakers to hear the difference, of course. It also comes with all the standard premium features Expect. Download: Neutron Player ($6.99) 14. Poweramp Image Gallery (3 Images) Poweramp's free trial has over a million reviews, which speaks to its popularity. The free trial lasts for 15 days, after which you will have to upgrade. Poweramp has everything you need in an advanced music player: a 10-band equalizer, gapless playback, crossfades, replay acquisition, built-in tag editor, quick library scanning, along with some other good dynamic queues. While this app may not be fancy, it's reliable. Download: Poweramp (Free trial) | Poweramp Full Version Unlocker ($4.99) 15. GoneMAD Player Image Gallery (3 Images) GoneMAD Player is the perfect music app if you like fiddling with and adjusting every little detail of your heart. It has a built-in theme builder and over 250 options that you can tweak. Or choose from over 1,000 already set themes if you don't want to change them yourself. Other noted features, above the standard premium, include an optimized media library that supports 50,000+ songs, two random modes, custom actions on queue completion, custom gestures, and multi-window support across multiple devices. Download: GoneMAD Player (Free trial) | GoneMAD Unlocker ($3.99) Which Android Music Player app do you like the most? Not everyone wants Spotify to have their music collection. Streaming music can be convenient, but listening to offline music is more reliable and doesn't use data. AIMP and Pixel Player are two of our favorite music apps, but you can't go wrong with any of the apps here. And if you really like the app, feel free to spend a few dollars to improve.
